All major programs are designed individually by the student in consultation with a departmental adviser. Cultural majors are encouraged to include among their electives related courses in history, history of art, philosophy, and other national languages and literatures.

MINOR

The department also encourages students with an active interest in German to minor in German. A minor in German consists of five courses above 203 Intermediate I. Two of these five courses are required: 204 Intermediate II and one of 303 or 304: Introduction to Literature. The remaining three may be selected from literature, advanced language, or culture, in consultation with a departmental adviser.

STUDY ABROAD

For both majors and minors, the department strongly recommends at least a semester of study in Germany. The department's exchange program with Jena is a Tulane accredited Junior Year and Junior Semester Abroad, and courses taken in Jena or Hamburg will receive credit at Tulane toward the Germanic studies majors. Other exchange programs may receive credit upon departmental review.

COURSES TAUGHT IN GERMAN

GERM 101 Elementary German I (4)

Staff. Introduction to German grammar. Development of basic language skills with particular emphasis on the active use of present-day German. For students with little or no previous knowledge of German. Meets four times a week.

GERM 102 Elementary German II (4)

Staff. Prerequisite: GERM 101 or placement. Continuation of the work begun in 101. Completes the student's introduction to German grammar and provides further practice in speaking, writing, and reading German. Prepares for 203. Meets four times a week.

GERM 112 Elementary German, Grammar Review (4)

Staff. Similar to GERM 102 but includes review of grammar and vocabulary of 101. For incoming students who have had about two years of high school German, but who are not placed at second-year level. Prepares for 203. Meets four times a week. Offered fall semester only.

GERM 203 Intermediate German (4)

Staff. Prerequisite: GERM 102, 112, or placement. An occasional review of German grammar, extensive reading, and considerable attention to building an active vocabulary sufficient for most conversation and general writing. Conducted in German except for explanations of grammar. Prepares for courses on the 300 level. Meets four times a week. Offered both semesters.

GERM 204 Intermediate German II (4)

Staff. Prerequisite: GERM 203 or placement. German 204 is the fourth semester of intermediate language study, following 203, and is the first required course for German majors and minors. Advanced practice in all discourse skills. Conducted entirely in German. Class discussion of readings, grammar review, composition, theatrical exercises. Student-driven communicative approach. Offered both semesters.

GERM 303 Introduction to Literature (3)

Staff. Prerequisite: GERM 204 or placement. Conducted in German. Reading of representative works of German prose, drama, and poetry. Introduction to techniques of literary analysis. Designed to introduce the student to a critical approach to literature. Discussion of content and explication of literary aspects of the text as well as textual analysis are stressed.

GERM 304 Introduction to Literature (3)

Staff. Prerequisite: GERM 203 or placement. Conducted in German. Similar to 303, but with different texts. Offered in spring semester only. German 303 and 304 may both be taken, with departmental approval, by those students needing further practice at this level.

GERM 325 German Language and Culture I (3)

Staff. Prerequisite: GERM 203, or equivalent, or placement. Conducted in German. Survey of German history from its beginning through the Age of Enlightenment, with emphasis on cultural and social aspects unique to Germany. Practice in the speaking and writing of German through discussions, debates and oral reports by individual students. Grammar review as needed. Offered in fall semester only.

GERM 326 German Language and Culture II (3)

Staff. Prerequisite: GERM 203, 303, or 325. Conducted in German. Survey of German history from the end of the 18th century to the present including a discussion of institutions and problems of contemporary German life and civilization. Majors are advised to take both 325 and 326. One of the two is required for prospective Junior Year Abroad students going to Germany.

GERM 372 Translation: Theory and Practice of an Impossible Art (3)

Staff. Prerequisite: approval of instructor. Proficiency in German required. Course introduces students to both practical and theoretical problems posed by translation in general and by English-German translation in particular. This class will learn by practicing translation and by reading theoretical texts about translation. Texts will include literature, news reports, and film subtitles.

GERM 425 Advanced Composition, Conversation, and Phonetics (3)

Staff. Prerequisite: approval of instructor. An intensive course stressing style both in academic and in current idiomatic German.

With its intellectual-historical approach, the course will examine key terms and analytic models in these thinkers as well as the intersection points among them. May be counted toward a major in German only with departmental approval and provided all reading is done in German.

GERM 355 German Literature in Translation (3)

Staff. Subject varies and is announced each semester. Typically a study of literary movements, genres, individual authors, or themes, e.g., the treatment of the Faust theme in German literature, Fairy Tales. May be repeated for credit. May be counted toward a major in German only with departmental approval and provided all reading is done in German.

GERM 366 German for Reading Knowledge (3)

Staff. Teaches students to read expository German prose on the basis of rapid study of basic verbal and nominal morphological patterns. No prior knowledge of the language is necessary. Open to undergraduates in all disciplines. Fulfills humanities requirement but not the undergraduate foreign language requirement. Graduate students are also welcome, but course does not grant graduate credit; it will however, prepare graduates to demonstrate proficiency.

RUSSIAN

Russian Studies provides students a wide range of opportunities to explore the culture and literature of Slavic countries. Such studies can serve as part of their general education, as a major in Russian Language and Literature, or a double major involving another discipline, as well as preparation for graduate school or an international professional career. Courses are offered in English as well as Russian and include modern and contemporary literature and linguistics. In addition, from time to time the department offers special topics courses in other Slavic languages, such as Czech, Old Church Slavonic, and Polish.

MAJOR

A major in Russian Language and Literature consists of at least nine courses totaling 27 credits above 203. It is expected that each major will plan a balanced program. Approval by the departmental adviser of each semester's program is required.

MINOR

A minor in Russian consists of five courses above 203 or its proficiency equivalent (i.e., five courses beginning with 204, selected with departmental consultation and approval, are required).
