is proud to announce

Céline Cousteau

as our Fall 2009 Powerhouse Speaker

People and the Natural World: An Exploration of Connections
As the international project coordinator for the Ocean Futures Society, environmental speaker Céline Cousteau travels the world, studying the intersection of nature and culture. From the jungles of the Amazon to remote islands near the Arctic, people have always maintained strong connections with the world around them. Cousteau reveals how our cultures and the plants and animals that surround us are all interconnected, showing that protection of the environment is also protection for our diverse cultures.

7 pm Thursday, October 29
Lavin-Bernick Center for Student Life
Tulane University

Powerhouse Speakers raises awareness of women’s contributions to society by featuring influential women across academic disciplines and professions who are role models for women. Past Powerhouse Speakers include publisher/activist Gloria Steinem, composer/historian Bernice Johnson Reagon, atmospheric scientists/hurricane hunters Robbie Hood and Michelle Mainelli, and architect/URBANbuild designer Ila Berman.