Trained in the office of Thomas Sully, Sam Stone, Jr. was one of New Orleans' more important 20th century architects. During the early part of his career, he worked for a number of years with his brothers, Guy and Grover, designing such buildings as the Masonic Temple in Mobile, Alabama, the Woodward Building in Birmingham, Alabama, and the Maison Blanche Building in New Orleans. On his own in the 1920's, he was responsible for the Masonic Temple Building in New Orleans, and other notable structures in the city.

PROVENANCE

Records were given by Samuel Payne Stone, Jr. to Tulane in 1979. Additional records were given by Thomas B. Holcombe, Jr. to Tulane in 1984.
