Course Description
This course examines several aspects of political communication processes in the United States. Special attention will be given to how the mass media, particularly television, frame political realities in specific ways and influence public perceptions and attitudes. Specific topics include the role of the media in shaping electoral campaigns, strategies of presidential communication, and public perceptions of international conflicts, especially the current War in Iraq. News coverage of social movements and political protest will also be discussed. The analysis focuses on traditional communication genres and formats (news coverage, political advertising, etc.), but also considers non-traditional forms of political communication (political cartoons, soft news, the Internet, etc.).

One of the central goals of the course is to enhance students’ ability to develop a critical and comprehensive analysis of media messages and to understand their central role in the mediation of power relations in the United States. To this purpose, the course will introduce the method of content analysis and students will be required to apply this research technique and to develop a systematic analysis of communication texts for their final papers.

Course Texts

Both books available through Tulane Bookstore.

Blackboard
Blackboard will be used for posting announcements, assignments, and other information. It will also be used for online discussions. The system can be accessed at <http://mytulane.blackboard.com>. If you have problems using the system, you can call the help desk: 862.8888.

Required texts
Besides the two textbooks, we will also work with several articles and book chapters which will be available online at Blackboard. Assigned readings should be completed prior to the classes for which they are listed in the syllabus. All students should have hard copies of the texts and bring them to the respective sessions. Failure to do so will affect your participation grade.
Attendance
Regular attendance is required and attendance will be taken in every class meeting. You can miss three class sessions without penalty in your participation grade. Seven unexcused absences will result in the final grade recommendation of a “WF.”

Evaluation
Your final evaluation will be based on the following:

1) Midterm exam: Students will take an in-class midterm exam which will cover the first two units (Parts I and II). A list of possible questions will be delivered to students in advance and two of the questions will be on the exam. The midterm is a closed book exam. Students should bring a pen and a blank blue book on the scheduled dates for the exam;

2) Final paper: Students will be required to write a 12-page final paper. The paper will be based on a content analysis of news coverage about a particular topic. The content analysis will be carried out by groups of three students, but each student will choose a specific topic and write a specific paper. More specific guidelines for the paper will be given later;

3) Participation: Students are expected to actively participate in class discussions. To have an effective participation, students should complete the assigned readings prior to the sessions for which they are listed in the syllabus and be ready to discuss them. Attendance will also be considered when assessing participation;

4) Readings summaries: Students should bring a one-page summary of the reading/s assigned for each session. Summaries should include the author/s’ main arguments and will be due in the beginning of class. Summaries can be typed or hand-written, and should include the student’s full name and the date of the session. Summaries will be graded as “sufficient” and “insufficient” and only the former will satisfy the requirement. If you deliver all summaries and they are graded “sufficient,” you will receive full credit for this portion of your grade (you can miss up to three summaries without penalty). If you do not, your grade will be proportionally lowered down to a possible “F” (50 points);

5) Discussion board: Students will be evaluated for their participation in the “Discussion Board” area of Blackboard. This is where our online discussions will take place. There will be one forum for each part of the course. Students should use the online board to engage with issues related to the readings or class discussions. There are no major restrictions on the postings, but students should be cordial and respectful when discussing classmates’ arguments. Failure to do so will disqualify the respective postings and may result in other penalties.

How to post to a discussion board: 1) click on the discussion board button; 2) click on the respective “forum” (Part I, II, etc.); 3) add a new “thread” (a new topic, with a new subject title) to the discussion or post a message (response or comment) to an existing thread. Click “add a new thread” to create a heading or click “reply” to comment on someone’s posting.

You will be expected to post at least one message (an original thread or a response to a classmate’s posting) in each of the 11 designated weeks for online discussions (listed below). Of the 11 required messages, 4 of them need to be original threads, which should include specific question/s to stimulate the debate. Whether you post more than these 11 messages is entirely up to you. As long as you complete the 11 minimum posts (four threads and seven messages in all designated weeks) with serious and thoughtful contributions, you will receive full credit for this portion of your grade. If you do not post all required messages, your grade will be proportionally lowered down to a possible “F” (50 points).

Designated weeks for online discussions - Week 1: Jan 22-27; Week 2: Jan 28-Feb 3; Week 3: Feb 11-17; Week 4: Feb 18-24; Week 5: Feb 25-Mar 2; Week 6: Mar 3-9; Week 7: Mar 10-16; Week 8: Mar 31-Apr 6; Week 9: Apr 7-13; Week 10: Apr 14-20; Week 11: Apr 21-27.
