MEDIA AND DEMOCRACY IN LATIN AMERICA
COMM 450 - Spring 2007

Course Description
This course analyzes the role of the mass media in contemporary Latin American democracies. We will investigate whether communication industries and institutions have contributed to promote or to impede democratic consolidation in the region. In particular, the course investigates how the mass media have affected the quality of political representation and of accountability mechanisms in these new democracies. After introducing and discussing the complex links between democracy, accountability, and the media, the course analyzes these links in the Latin American context, focusing on the cases of Mexico and Brazil. Moving beyond the realm of traditional journalism, we will also consider the role of entertainment-oriented genres, including tabloid journalism and telenovelas (soap operas). The question of the relationship between media and neopopulist leaders is then introduced, as well as the role of media scandals. Finally, the course concludes with a discussion of the obstacles and prospects for the democratization of media and political spheres in the region.

One of the central goals of the course is to provide conceptual tools that will enable students to develop a critical and comprehensive analysis of the role of the mass media in contemporary Latin American democracies. In particular, the course offers an analytical framework that focuses on the links between accountability mechanisms, civil society mobilization, and the mass media.

Course Texts

Both books available through Tulane Bookstore.

Blackboard
Blackboard will be used for posting announcements, assignments, and other information. It will also be used for online discussions. The system can be accessed at <http://blackboard.tulane.edu>. If you have problems using the system, you can call the help desk: 862.8888.

Required texts
Besides the two textbooks, we will work with several articles and book chapters which will be available online at Blackboard. Assigned readings should be completed prior to the classes for which they are listed in the syllabus. All students should have hard copies of the texts and bring them to the respective sessions. Failure to do so will affect your participation grade.
Attendance
Regular attendance is required and attendance will be taken in every class meeting. You can miss three class sessions without penalty in your participation grade. Seven unexcused absences will result in the final grade recommendation of a “WF”.

Evaluation
Your final evaluation will be based on the following:

1) Midterm exam: Students will take an in-class midterm exam which will cover the first two units (Parts I and II). A list of possible questions will be delivered to students in advance and two of the questions will be on the exam. The midterm is a closed book exam. Students should bring a pen and a blank blue book on the scheduled dates for the exam;

2) Final paper: Students will be required to write a 10/12-page final paper. Specific guidelines for the paper will be given later;

3) Participation: Students are expected to actively participate in class discussions. To have an effective participation, students should complete the assigned readings prior to the sessions for which they are listed in the syllabus and be ready to discuss them. Attendance will also be considered when assessing participation;

4) Readings summaries: Students should bring a one-page summary of the reading/s assigned for each session. Summaries should include the author/s’ main argument, as well as criticisms and questions about the argument, and will be due in the beginning of class. Summaries can be typed or hand-written, and should include the student’s full name and the date of the session. Summaries will be graded as “sufficient” and “insufficient” and only the former will satisfy the requirement. If you deliver all summaries and they are graded “sufficient,” you will receive full credit for this portion of your grade. If you do not, your grade will be proportionally lowered down to a possible “F” (50 points);

5) Discussion board: Students will be evaluated for their participation in the “Discussion Board” area of Blackboard. This is where our online discussions will take place. There will be one forum for each part of the course. Students should use the online board to engage with issues related to the readings or class discussions. There are no major restrictions on the postings, but students should be cordial and respectful when discussing classmates’ arguments. Failure to do so will disqualify the respective postings and may result in other penalties.

How to post to a discussion board: 1) click on the discussion board button; 2) click on the respective “forum” (Part I, II, etc.); 3) add a new “thread” (a new topic, with a new subject title) to the discussion or post a message (response or comment) to an existing thread. Click "add a new thread" to create a heading or click “reply” to comment on someone’s posting.

You will be expected to post at least one message (an original thread or a response to a classmate’s posting) in each of the 13 designated weeks for online discussions (listed below). Of the 13 required messages, 5 of them need to be original threads. Whether you post more than these 13 messages is entirely up to you. As long as you complete the 13 minimum posts (five threads and eight messages in all designated weeks) with serious and thoughtful contributions, you will receive full credit for this portion of your grade. If you do not post all required messages, your grade will be proportionally lowered down to a possible “F” (50 points).

Designated weeks for online discussions - Week 1: Jan 22-28; Week 2: Jan 29-Feb 4; Week 3: Feb 5-11; Week 4: Feb 12-18; Week 5: Feb 19-25; Week 6: Feb 26-Mar 4; Week 7: Mar 5-11; Week 8: Mar 12-18; Week 9: Mar 26-Apr 1; Week 10: Apr 2-8; Week 11: Apr 9-15; Week 12: Apr 16-22; Week 13: Apr 23-29.
