Online Environmental Justice Resources

Prepared by Wil Burns, PhD (Santa Clara University School of Law) and Marley Bauce, MA (New York University)

This compilation of over 500 entries celebrates the tremendous diversity of internet-based champions of Environmental Justice, Environmental Sociology, Economics and Philosophy, Grassroots environmental action movements, and Political Ecology. Committed to the idea of justice to which we speak, our entries are all readily available to be utilized by any user with access to the World Wide Web – nothing requires a fee, membership, contribution or disclosure of personal information of any kind. These resources range from scholarly articles and syllabi, to websites for community-based and national organizations, to documents issued by governmental and inter-governmental bodies; this formidable diversity of sources found within this database is meant to accurately survey the complex varieties of rationales, goals, implementation models and interests of environmental justice initiatives in the United States and abroad. In the efforts of reaching an evermore-comprehensive listing, we welcome your input and suggestions for additional entries and/or categories.
